Politics, Not Science? CDC Takes Radical U-Turn on Pandemic Narrative

In recent days, the pandemic narrative has undergone a remarkable number of U-turns, including the admission by Centers for Disease Control and Prevention Director Dr. Rochelle Walensky that COVID shots cannot prevent transmission.

Story at-a-glance:

- In recent days, the pandemic narrative has undergone a remarkable number of U-turns.

- Jan. 9 CDC director Dr. Rochelle Walensky sent out a tweet saying “We must protect people with comorbidities from severe COVID-19,” in other words, focused protection, which is what tens of thousands of doctors have been calling for since the creation of The Great Barrington Declaration in early October 2020.
- Jan. 10 Walensky admitted that the COVID shots cannot prevent transmission.
- The CDC is now saying you should not retest once you’ve recovered from COVID, as the PCR can provide false positives for up to 12 weeks after the infection has been resolved. They’re also cutting the isolation requirement from 10 to just five days — probably because the failing economy is hurting Biden’s approval rating so they need people to work.
- The narrative is also changing on what makes for a COVID case and how deaths are counted. Walensky recently admitted about 40% of “COVID patients” tested positive but do not have symptoms and are hospitalized for something else. She has also promised to deliver data on how many people have actually died “from” COVID and how many died “with” it.

Credibility In Shreds: CDC's Shocking Admission On ...

As noted by Dr. Ron Paul in the Jan. 10 Liberty Report above, U.S. authorities have suddenly started to change their tune with regard to COVID and the COVID shots.

“The opposition to our position are starting to wake up,” Paul says, as some shreds of truth are actually starting to be acknowledged. The good news, Paul says, is that “Maybe some of the things they’ve been saying are not quite accurate, and maybe what we’ve been saying is closer to the truth and maybe they’re starting to recognize that.”

CDC director now calls for focused protection

Indeed, in recent days, the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) has made a remarkable number of U-turns, completely reversing course on several narrative points.

For example, in a Jan. 10 CNN interview, CDC director Dr. Rochelle Walensky actually admitted that “what [the COVID shots] can’t do anymore is prevent transmission,” whereas before, the narrative was that if you get the jab, you have nothing to worry about anymore.

In July 2021, President Biden promised that if you get vaccinated, “you’re not going to get COVID.” Well, it wasn’t true. Many knew that but were censored when pointing it out.

A day earlier, Jan. 9, Walensky also sent out a tweet saying “We must protect people with comorbidities from severe COVID-19,” which is what tens of thousands of doctors have been calling for since the creation of The Great Barrington Declaration in early October 2020. It called for focused protection of high-risk individuals, such as the elderly, rather than blanket lockdowns.

It was recently revealed that Dr. Anthony Fauci, director of the National Institutes of Allergy and Infectious Diseases and his former boss, now retired National Institutes of Health director Francis Collins, colluded behind the scenes to quash the declaration.

BUY TODAY: Robert F. Kennedy, Jr.'s New Book — 'The Real Anthony Fauci'

For whatever reason, Fauci and Collins were hell-bent on pushing economy-destroying lockdowns instead. In an Oct. 8, 2020, email to Fauci, Collins wrote:

“The proposal from the three fringe epidemiologists who met with the Secretary seems to be getting a lot of attention ... There needs to be a quick and devastating published take down of its premises ...”

“Don’t worry, I got this,” Fauci replied. Later, Fauci sent Collins links to newly published articles refuting the focused protection solution, including an op-ed in Wired magazine, and an article in The Nation, titled “Focused Protection, Herd Immunity and Other Deadly Delusions.”

CDC follows political strategy, not science

Now, all of a sudden, Walensky is onboard with the “deadly delusion” of focused protection. Her about-face would be confusing were it not for the fact that COVID countermeasures were never about protecting the public from a virus. From the start, the pandemic had political goals, and it still does.

The pressure is now on to prove the Biden administration has made some sort of progress with the pandemic. Biden made a lot of promises, none of which have come to fruition, so now the political establishment is scrounging to come up with some plan that can make them look as though they’re getting somewhere.

The problem is that cases are now exploding, when a successful vaccine campaign should have brought the situation under control. So, they now need a way to minimize the number of cases, whereas before, they used every trick in the book to overcount them, in order to scare people into complying with COVID restrictions and getting the jab.

New testing guidance aims to lower case rates

One simple way to cut down cases is to limit testing — and that’s another U-turn we’re now seeing. The CDC is now saying you should not retest once you’ve recovered from COVID. If you test positive, just quarantine for five days and don’t retest to confirm that you’re negative, as the PCR can provide false positives for up to 12 weeks after the infection has been resolved.

Well, we’ve known this for nearly two years already. From the start, experts warned that the PCR cannot be used to diagnose an active infection, as it can pick up RNA from dead, noninfectious viral debris.

Health authorities are now spinning the tale that these revisions in guidance are because we have two years' worth of data, and they're just following the science. But that's pure baloney, seeing how the data never supported their COVID restrictions in the first place.

The CDC's decision to revise quarantine guidelines down from 10 days to just five days also appears politically motivated. Polls show the economy is a primary concern of voting Americans right now, so they need to strike a balance between the desired demolition of the economy and keeping people at work — at least until the 2022 elections are over.

In short, I suspect most if not all of the recent changes in COVID guidance is to build a narrative that the Biden administration has successfully brought the pandemic under control and reestablished a working economy. The change in narrative is based on political strategy, not science.

CDC highlights role of comorbidities in vaxxed COVID deaths

Here is the unedited version of Rochelle Walensky's comments, where it's clear that her comments about comorbidities were referring solely to a CDC study of vaccinated people, and not to all "Covid deaths," as ppl like Clay Travis have claimed. pic.twitter.com/Z7ojQv3gem

— James Surowiecki (@JamesSurowiecki) January 11, 2022

As noted by Paul in the Liberty Report above, Walensky recently stated that 75% of COVID deaths had four or more comorbidities, "So, really, these are people who were unwell to begin with." The admission went viral and was cited as proof that COVID is a lethal risk for none but the sickest among us.

The CDC quickly stepped in, clarifying that she meant "75% of COVID deaths among those who have received the COVID jab," not COVID deaths overall. You can see the unedited segment above, where that context is made clear. Still, we know that COVID poses very little risk for healthy unvaccinated people as well, and that comorbidities are a primary risk factor regardless of your COVID jab status.

COVID death risk has always been low — vaxxed or not

For example, a 2020 study found 88% of hospitalized COVID patients in New York City had two or more comorbidities, 6.3% had one underlying health condition and 6.1% had none.

In late August 2020, the CDC published data showing only 6% of the total death count had COVID-19 listed as the sole cause of death. The remaining 94% had had an average of 2.6 comorbidities or preexisting health conditions that contributed to their deaths. So, yes, COVID is a lethal risk only for the sickest among us, just as Walensky said, but that's true whether you're "vaccinated" or not.

As for the study Walensky discussed in that "Good Morning America" segment, it found that of the 1.2 million COVID jabbed subjects, only 0.0033% died of COVID between December 2020 and October 2021. (And of those, 77.8% had four or more comorbidities.) This study, Walensky claims as evidence that the COVID shot works wonders to reduce the risk of death.

But does it really? Recall studies showing the noninstitutionalized infection fatality rate is on average just 0.26% to begin with, and people under the age of 40 have only a 0.01% risk of dying from COVID.

When we're talking about a fraction of a percentage point risk, we're talking about a risk that is close to statistical zero. So, does lowering your risk of death from 0.01% to 0.003% really translate into something worthwhile? And, more importantly, is that reduction worth the risks involved with taking the jab?

Clearly, it's not a risk-free decision. OneAmerica, a national mutual life insurance company, recently warned that all-cause deaths among working-age Americans (18 to 64) are up 40% over prepandemic norms, and they cannot be attributed to COVID.

So, what's causing these deaths? What potentially deadly thing did tens of millions of Americans do in 2021 that they've never done before? I'll let you ponder whether Walensky's claim that the COVID jab is saving lives is an accurate one.

Is the political pandemic in its final death throes?

In a Jan. 10 blog post, Jeff Childers, an attorney, and the president and founder of Childers Law firm, presents a hypothesis for why we might be looking at the end of the pandemic, as the Biden administration has "no reasonable alternative but to wrap this whole thing up in the next 60 days or so."

"There's an interesting political dynamic shaping up, a kind of political vice grip that might just be driving federal COVID policy toward authenticity and an end to the pandemic ... a lot of reality has been breaking through lately," Childers writes.

He points out how a federal judge recently ordered the U.S. Food and Drug Administration to release all the Pfizer COVID jab data that the agency wanted 75 years to release.

Agreed! " ... it is dystopian for the government to give Pfizer billions, mandate Americans to take its product, prohibit Americans from suing for harms, but yet refuse to let Americans see the data underlying its licensure.”<https://t.co/sXGTB3j52Z>

— Robert F. Kennedy Jr (@RobertKennedyJr) December 10, 2021

The bulk of that data is now due March 1, the day of Biden’s State of the Union address. Childers suspects the Pfizer documents will contain plenty of counternarrative fodder and politically embarrassing details.

Why we’re seeing a u-turn in the narrative now

Biden needs some good news by his State of the Union address, as it’ll be his last chance to “help move the needle back toward blue,” and the way he can do that is by declaring the pandemic over. He can then claim to be the great liberator who ended the pandemic measures for good.

“If they handle this right, they can give their voting base and sycophantic media agents all the necessary talking points to boost Dem prospects for the midterm elections,” Childers writes.

But to pull off that U-turn with any semblance of credibility, they have to start cutting the case rate now, and that’s precisely what we’re seeing. For example, the CDC recently changed its guidelines so you don’t need to retest after you’ve recovered from COVID, so no more false positives from recovered people.

Florida’s official policy is now to only test high-risk individuals and those who are symptomatic. Childers points out that the left-leaning Sun Sentinel even ran an article highlighting the fact that despite surging case rates, Florida has the lowest COVID death rate in the nation, second only to the sparsely populated Alaska.

“What incredibly powerful force could make the Sun Sentinel downplay the pandemic like this?” he asks.

Will we finally get a more accurate death count?

The CDC also appears poised to change the definition of COVID death to what it should have been all along. Childers notes:

“Fox News ... Bret Baier ... asked [Walensky] ‘how many of the 836,000 deaths in the U.S. linked to COVID are FROM COVID or how many are WITH COVID?’

Director Walensky said ... ‘those data will be forthcoming.’ Until about 10 minutes ago, the CDC said it didn’t HAVE any way to track that kind of information ... But now, apparently, CDC plans to release information about deaths from and with. What do you want to bet they’ll be REDUCING total COVID deaths shortly? By a lot.”

They’re also starting to accurately count only those who are actually sick with COVID rather than including people hospitalized for other reasons who just happen to test positive.

“Yesterday, New York Governor Hochul announced that almost HALF of patients are hospitalized for ‘non-COVID reasons,’ scattering the rotting corpse of the Narrative.

“You might recall that just last week she ordered hospitals to start breaking down the reported figures and showing how many folks ACTUALLY are sick with COVID versus just testing positive in the hospital. We’ve been yelling about overcounting hospitalizations for two years now and they just noticed?”

Same narrative switch seen in Europe

The same sudden switch in narrative can be seen in Europe. Childers continues:

"Yesterday, the Guardian UK ran a story headlined, 'End mass jabs and live with COVID, says ex-head of vaccine taskforce.' It says Dr. Clive Dix — former chairman of the UK's vaccine taskforce — has called for a 'major rethink' of the UK's COVID strategy, in effect reversing the approach of the past two years and returning to a 'new normality.'

"Shocking the cores the oft-maligned authors of the Great Barrington Declaration, Dr. Dix — without getting canceled — said this:

"We need to analyze whether we use the current booster campaign to ensure the vulnerable are protected, if this is seen to be necessary ... Mass population-based vaccination in the UK should now end.'

"Ending mass vaccinations? Suddenly that idea is okay to discuss in the corporate media? Wow."

In a Jan. 3 interview with the Daily Telegraph, professor Andrew Pollard, head of the U.K.'s Committee on Vaccination and Immunization who helped create the Oxford-AstraZeneca shot, also made a previously verboten statement: "We can't vaccinate the planet every four or six months," he said. "It's not sustainable or affordable."

And, like Dix, Pollard was not canceled, censored or deplatformed.

BUY TODAY: Robert F. Kennedy, Jr.'s New Book — 'The Real Anthony Fauci'

Jan. 11 Bloomberg also reported:

"European Union regulators warned that frequent COVID-19 booster shots could adversely affect the immune response and may not be feasible. Repeat booster doses every four months could eventually weaken the immune response and tire out people, according to the European Medicines Agency."

Marco Cavaleri, the EMA's head of vaccines strategy, said during a Jan. 11 press briefing:

"While use of additional boosters can be part of contingency plans, repeated vaccinations within short intervals would not represent a sustainable long-term strategy. [Boosters] can be done once, or maybe twice, but it's not something that we can think should be repeated constantly. We need to think about how we can transition from the current pandemic setting to a more endemic setting."

That same day, the World Health Organization's Technical Advisory Group on COVID-19 Vaccine Composition also issued a statement saying that "a vaccination strategy based on repeated booster doses of the original vaccine composition is unlikely to be appropriate or sustainable."

They also stated that COVID vaccines that actually prevent infection and transmission need to be developed. The timing of all these statements is nothing if not remarkable. It shows just how coordinated this plandemic narrative is, all around the world.

Justice Sotomayor called out

Perhaps the best example that the narrative is undergoing a radical overhaul, Childers says, is Supreme Court Justice Sonia Sotomayor being fact checked and called out as a liar by The Washington Post:

“You’ll recall that Sotomayor confidently told the lawyers during oral argument Friday that ‘100,000’ children were in critical care and on ventilators with Omicron. The lawyers didn’t challenge her even though there aren’t that many total ICU beds in the whole country.

“But on Saturday — the next day! — the Washington Post ran an article headlined, ‘Sotomayor’s false claim that ‘over 100,000’ children are in ‘serious condition’ with COVID.’ FALSE CLAIM?? What?? Here’s how the fact-checking article ended:

“It’s important for Supreme Court justices to make rulings based on correct data ... But Sotomayor during an oral argument offered a figure — 100,000 children in ‘serious condition ... many on ventilators’ — that is absurdly high. She earns Four Pinocchios.’ It might be unprecedented for a major liberal newspaper to call out a liberal Justice. What could be going on? ...

“There seems to be a LOT of sudden momentum surging in the direction of ending the pandemic. If I’m right, we’re going to see even more of this, and pretty quickly, since Biden has to wrap it up in time to declare victory on March 1. Which would explain why they pushed the SOTU back a month. They need the time to get the pandemic wrapped up.”

Klaus Schwab couldn't care less about Joe Biden, or the Democrats in the US. Therefore, the premise that the Covid Narrative has changed simply because of US politics is on shaky ground. Naomi Wolf (a proud Dem) scolded Steve Bannon (Mr. MAGA himself) the other day for trying to use Covid to ensure Midterm votes this year, "With respect, you're missing the point: there won't BE a midterm election if the WEF accomplishes its goal." Also, Michael Yeadon convincingly proposed that the PTB (powers that be) have already planned this retreat. Does anybody really think that Joe Biden and his handlers falsely predicted the recent Supreme Court decision? No, something else is coming down the pike.

No just Floridians, my neighbor just came over to drop off some eggs and told me that her sister in law was given monoclonal antibodies with NO symptoms and a positive (useless) test

She was going to the hospital because the baby isn't moving. This is criminal.

The latest monoclonal antibody drug attaches a mutation to a cell which governs fetal/newborn immunity (lactating mothers)

The mutation is associated with leukemia and other forms of cancer. Why exactly would they want to give ANYONE this drug -

<https://www.unite4truth.com...>

If you look at the core mechanisms of how ALL their 'treatments' work, by the mechanisms of design, they will cause injury/and or death

Feature not a flaw. It is a mark of how totally corrupt our medical system has become that doctors have not done even the most basic review of the drugs they prescribe because this issue is NOT new to Covid treatments

Look at Malone's vaccine - its poison by design, aluminum directly into cells by recombinant DNA technology along with cells which induce LUNG INJURY in animal studies - there is NO property of these mechanisms or ingredients which will provide ANY health benefit

What is at play is a combination of things. The need to make Biden appear competent and the Dems not lose control of the House is part of it. It is also about the history of how Fauci, the CDC and the FDA are all in bed with pharma and greed and lust for power and recognition trump everything they do. To all of them, it's all about vaccines not about health. Third, part of the demonic domestic and globalist dictators plan to not only kill a lot of people with a vaccine because fewer people means more for them, but see how willing people are to give up their freedom, rights, reason and commonsense if they are fearful of dying and their plan to destroy all democratic principles to usher in their total control over human life and the earth's resources depended upon relentless fear-mongering, changing the goals and keeping people confused. The last two points have been very successful for them. If the useful idiot Biden and the useful idiot Democrats can maintain a majority rule longer than two years, they will make certain they are the only party forever.

It's a tactical retreat based on very low approval ratings from Biden on down. If we keep the heat on, keep shining light on Fauci and Gates and similar cockroaches, we will win. To restore representative democracy, we will need to continually force whatever politicians are in office to represent us, and to fire at elections those who don't. We are not supposed to have leaders, but representatives, and we need to remember that. Politicians will represent us when we make it in their interest to do so. I hate to seem pessimistic but I wonder if they are backing off a bit having already inflicted the intended damage on billions. We simply must heal and I don't believe any political, corporate, academic leaders or agency officials are, or were, interested in our healing. Nor do I believe anymore that our votes have or will determine election outcomes. They are just trying to reestablish the illusion that our votes, our well-being, our very existence even, matters to them. This has been a calling for us to once and for all realize that our only true Source of safety and security, of peace and of love is that which we are of and in us all - God. Above all things, literally, keep meditating, praying and loving then suddenly, all hearts and minds will overlap and unite as one ... the Great Awakening; Heaven on Earth transcending 3D linear spacetime constraints (as well our mind's capture, manipulation and imprisonment in the even lower state of the flat 2D illuminated screens). Well, I don't know what the "great awakening" is, but let me ask you a question. HOW did you get

"all realize that our only true Source of safety and security, of peace and of love is that which we are of and in us all - God." out of all the death and destruction and horror that's happened over these last 2 years? I mean, people DIED either because there's some conspiracy to gain something by the government and stupid people have left go this long, or they died by a disease made by some psycho freak of nature for no reason EXCEPT to kill. And you say God? Where's He at for all this time? Or at all? See, I have always been church goer and a Bible reader and a pray-er. My Daddy died in 2009. He wrote gospel music for most of my life and the last song he finished went #1 on the gospel music charts in a week. He knew the Bible backwards, forwards, and upside down and taught me to read it, remember it, treat the knowledge the way it deserved, with awe and humility and gratefulness. So, I learned the Bible backwards, forwards and upside down, just like my Daddy and for years it was the one book that I went to 2,3,4 times a day. I wrote in it, highlighted and otherwise marked in it. But then I started watching the news (well reading actually because noise bothers me) and I saw stories about high levels of corruption and people who just happened to know things inconvenient for others dying. Well, God had a plan for that person was what the answer was. Okay, I'll take that. Then

This is so hard to do by thumbs on a screen, but your question is so important. Given that you have a lifetime of exposure to the Scriptures, you know that "if the Creator were good and wise, He wouldn't allow the world to suck this bad" is not a conclusion that can be drawn from the New Testament. (Although it IS a common sense conclusion from every monotheistic religious system globally that does not involve Jesus, and the atheists' most frequent objection to faith). I would be so interested in hearing your understanding of Isaiah's prophecy (chapter 53) of the Messiah, and of Jesus' prophecies of what direction we can expect the world to progress between His departure and the "return of the King" (to borrow from LoTR). I don't ask you to consider any of this for any purpose other than to refocus you perhaps on what it is you are actually critiquing. You don't sound like you want or need a debate, and I don't either.

In other words, I think your growing objection is to theism in general, religion in general, but Jesus was and is the enemy of religion and an ambassador of a truer vision of God ... Someone who knows better than any of us how intensely love entails pain. Because He feels it the most (to infinitely understate the matter). God can do all things except make square circles. And that is the problem. Logical impossibilities are impossible even for Omnipotence. So in our relationship with Him, it helps to ask Him what those impossibilities are.

That's enough for this forum. If you'd like to chat more, I am at timothypotter777@protonmail.com

What a concise and clear response Timothy. I think the modern church has been sold this idea that if we believe died for us then all our lives will be free of pain and sorrow, that is certainly not what any of the apostles say, and certainly not what Jesus said. If anything, things will get tougher, this is Satan's realm, I've often thought this is a bit of a, for lack of better terminology, testing ground for us. No matter how long our life, it is but a blink of an eye compared to eternity. Michael Leunig, an Australian cartoonist likened it to people on holiday, some have a great long holiday, some don't, but whatever it is it is temporary until we are reunited with our Lord. What can we learn, how can we grow. As for the things happening now, they are right out of prophecy written almost a thousand years and thousands more before that. Hold on to Jesus it's going to get bumpy. He promised to be with us through things not take us out of them. The people behind this evil will stand before God just as we do in judgment. I choose to be covered by Christ's blood.

Perhaps you are expecting God to do what we should be doing. You stated you went to your bible up to 4 times a day. Maybe you should use that dedication in a different way. I see your talent is editing and proofreading. Start forwarding important information you read to conservative sites like Rose did above.

Get on sites like GETTR, Gab, etc. where you can put your two cents in and share information with others who know exactly how you are feeling. I was surprised to find so many like-minded people in one place and they will follow you and you them so as things come up you have others to help shoulder the frustration. It beats throwing balled up socks at my TV.

You must think more about what actions we can take to stop the despicable destruction happening rather than dwell on the ugly evil outcomes we are seeing by too few good people doing nothing.

If you believe God created you, then perhaps it's for this. Maybe this time God needs to count on you instead of you counting too much on him.

The comment section is very nice ,a place to let off steam ,but non of us like minded people will ever meet in person .There should be a system where like minded people can meet in person in towns and cities or in the open .Can some one be found to arrange that .??I would be willing to make a donation to get something going .

Dearest Beth. Your comments brought tears to my eyes. You are closer to God than you think. The representatives of Christ in your life have taken the easy way out. PLEASE purchase " Disappointment with God" by Phillip Yancy. Jesus Christ had the same question. He loves you.

The CDC and FDA is comprised of self-serving idiots that never should have been listened to in the first place. I couldn't care one iota what any of them say or do.

There is a rule about not wishing harm on people, apart from hoping they meet the full force of the law. Regarding Nadal and Federer they do seem to be big buddies of Bill Gates.

Re-direct your attention to an affinity analysis of 9500 lots of Pfizer vaccine administered thru Nov 2021, using VAERS data. Specific lots drew incredible number of adverse reactions, including a linear decrease over time. No other possible interpretation, other than intent. Yes; the article shows that Walensky' and Fauci will say anything to stay in power, and that most every step of theirs was a mis-step. The Great Barrington Declaration was spot on, early on. I signed it immediately. This article can help people who have not woken up remember, in chronological order, the conflicting, confusing and corrupt steps taken by an arrogant group who thought they were Teflon; just as Jeffrey Epstein did, just as Richard Nixon did, just as McCarthy did.

The Unanswered Question

To Doctor Fauci and President Biden, the General Assembly of the United Nations, The heads of the governments of Europe and Asia and all the free nations of the world, including Australia, Canada and the United States. and while we're at it, the major media outlets such as CNN, CBS, NBC, ABC, the BBC, Al Jazeera, the Catholic, Protestant, Jewish, Muslim, and other religions: Do you believe that slavery should be reinstated and every constitution that has abolished slavery should be changed so it is no longer illegal to commit others to be slaves? Because that is what mandates are committing you to worldwide.

There can be no saying that it's only temporary because there is nothing temporary about it. It's been 2 years and we see every day that we're inching closer and closer to a permanent state of "You order and we must obey".

Germany has already once tried to forbid the unvaccinated access to food. Thank God for small favors because it was too much for the shop owners.

Children in Australia are ripped out the arms of their parents to be shot against their will.

In some places, the military shoots into the crowds of protesters.

And it's all to make the people obey.

So I hope the next time Rand Paul has Mr. Fauci, he asks the unanswered question, "Mr. Fauci, do you believe that the 13th and 14th amendments to the Constitution of the United States of America should be repealed and that slavery should be reinstituted in this country?"

I'd be interested in the answer. Wouldn't you

It is all part of the scam plan, they do not want to risk that more people start questioning the narrative (and may discover the whole Germ/Infection Theory is scientifically unproven to date)

narrative (and may discover the whole Germ/Infection theory is scientifically unproven to date). So they ease a bit while keeping people ready to accept to surrender at any time and then launch the next fear scam soon. Agenda 2030 is still on, they only want to take out momentum on the growing awareness and resistance. We need to stay alert and demand not just our taken freedoms back but take back authority from government by a large scale. Corrupt politicians must fall and the puppet masters must be exposed. #LIBERTARIAN-WORLD

One way we can measure the US's COVID response is deaths per million.

If you look at worldometer and rank countries by population, you will see there are 92 countries in the world with 10 million or more people.

Ranking by COVID deaths per million since the start of the epidemic, the US is 6th worst on that list.

If you look at the last week totals, the US is 3rd worst of those 92 countries.

It kind of makes sense given everything Fauci has done to stifle treatments that actually work, supplements and healthy lifestyle choices.
